Bad breath - whether chronic or temporary - cannot be effectively treated with "generic" bad breath products, such as mouthwashes, home-made rinses or herbal remedies. Most oral rinses available today - even 2nd or 3rd generation mouthwashes (otherwise known as oxidisers) - are in fact broad-spectrum antibiotics, that is, they do not target specific strains of bacteria and their effects typically last less than an hour. The same goes for home-made remedies, including hydrogen peroxide rinses, baking soda, tea tree oil, or any other natural or herbal "bad breath remedy". Because bad breath is often just a symptom of other conditions, infections or diseases that you may or may not be aware of (not necessarily serious), treating bad breath "directly" means you are only addressing a symptom, not the root causes of the problem. Furthermore, the causes of halitosis will be different for each bad breath sufferer, making each particular case unique, with different factors involved, and hence different strains of bacteria (or fungi) involved. Bacterial imbalances are present for a reason. Determining the root causes of your bad breath, and hence identifying your particular type of bad breath, is what will enable you to use specific methods, tools, treatments and remedies that will target the actual root causes of your bad breath problem. The author will take you, step by step, through the process of identification of all the root causes (often multiple) of your bad breath problem, and provide you with the methods, tools and specific remedies or treatments that will target your particular type of bad breath. This is an in-depth, practical self-instructional guide that contains all the information and advice you need to effectively cure your bad breath: Proven strategies, techniques and little-known at-home treatments and remedies that will help you freshen your breath from day 1, whether your bad breath is chronic or temporary. Therefore, in this book, I will be using the term halitosis and bad breath interchangeably as both mean the same thing. Besides that, other terms like breath odor or oral malodor can also be used to describe the same situation where strikingly nasty odors are exhaled during breathing process. Yes, these bacteria are responsible for the transformation of those food particles into what we get as bad breath or mouth odor. Now, to be upfront with you, it is important for us to know that the problem starts when an individual's oral hygiene is so poor that it allows many of these bacteria to begin to reproduce in their thousands which will eventually give rise to bad breath or halitosis. And I must say here that, several varieties of such bacteria are typically found behind the individual's tongue which protects them from regular mouth activities as the brush hardly reach the nether parts of the tongue. What this means is that these bacteria will then have a filled day multiplying without any inhibitions.
